MY DEAR PROFESSOR COTTRELL:

...
In our situation, you assert that our actions are not covered by the law.

The Constitution of the United States guarantees the right to freedom of religion, and the establishment of a religion is prohibited by the First Amendment. We believe that the actions of the government in this case are not in line with these principles.

We are committed to upholding the principles of religious freedom and the protection of our rights as citizens. We will not yield to pressure or coercion from the government and will continue to pursue our cause.

Yours sincerely,

Letter from Martin Luther King Jr.
The idea of necessity.

The necessity of the event, in the play of fortune on the life of every human being. The necessity of the event, in the play of fortune on the life of every human being. The necessity of the event, in the play of fortune on the life of every human being. The necessity of the event, in the play of fortune on the life of every human being. The necessity of the event, in the play of fortune on the life of every human being.
